

PLECS Student Licensing Terms and Conditions

With this special academic licensing policy, Plexim grants a professor at an institute of higher education access to student licenses of PLECS. To be eligible for these student licenses, a professor must acknowledge receipt and understanding of these terms and conditions.

Once a professor has reviewed and accepted these terms and conditions, Plexim will send at least one license code for accessing PLECS student licenses to the professor. Plexim will either send a single, multiuse license code or a license code list of single use codes. The professor is tasked with distributing the license code(s). If the professor is sent a code list, the professor is tasked with assigning codes from the list to individual students, either directly or via a recognized Teaching Assistant or IT lab assistant.

With a license code, a student can request a license file on Plexim's website for a free, personal student license. This student license allows the student to use PLECS Blockset, PLECS Standalone and the PLECS Coder in conjunction with their studies and coursework. A student license under this agreement is only provided to students who are enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate (but not post-doctoral) program at the university.

The following terms and conditions apply to this licensing policy:

- The license code is assigned in connection with the university's email domain.
- The license code or the code list expire after an individually agreed upon time period (usually one or two years).
- The student license is free of charge and is valid for one year from the date of fulfillment. An expired license file will not allow the student to use PLECS. As long as a student retains his/her status during the following academic year a new license request may be submitted by them at that time.
- Software updates for the student licenses are included during the 12-month license period. Updated license files for major software releases will be e-mailed directly to the student.
- It is the responsibility of the user (student) and professor to adhere to these terms and conditions.
- Plexim reserves the rights to discontinue accepting license codes at any time if students or professors are in non-compliance of these terms and conditions.
- Plexim can terminate this licensing policy at any time, however it guarantees a notification period of six months before termination and any new student license requests using existing valid license codes will be accepted.

A PLECS student license is bound to the following restrictions:

- The professor in charge may use one student license for his/her own computer. The corresponding PLECS license may only be used for teaching and classroom instructions.
- The student license can only be assigned to a student's personal computer in connection with a personalized login username matching the specific student.
- Each PLECS student license can be installed on one designated computer only and must be operated from that computer's console. Accessing PLECS via remote terminal sessions is not allowed.
- The student license shall only be used for work related to classroom instruction and/or research activities. It is expressly prohibited to use the student license for any other purpose, including for postdoctoral research and for commercial activities.

General Licensing Agreement

Please be advised that Plexim's License Agreement is an integral part of these terms and conditions.
